Egypt : Culture and attire

Egyptians live in a very dry area. Thus they usually use long and mostly a body covering dress. The most used outwear is "kaftan" which is a coat-like cloth piece with long wide sleeves. Kaftans are generally made from silk, cotton, brocade and satin. Also they wear skullcap or a fez on their head. This protects them from extreme heat and dry weather.

Now imagine you meet a man from Egypt and write a short conversation that you would like to have with him. You can have a comparative discussion between the traditional outfit of your country and theirs. A man in Egyptian outfit is given below for reference.

you : Hello! I am _____

the man from Egypt : Hi, I am Abram from Cairo.

you : Your dress is beautiful. What is it called, if you don't mind?

the man from Egypt : _____

you : _____

the man from Egypt : Your outfit is charming as well and colourful too.

Egypt : Desert

The northern region of Egypt is bounded by two deserts whereas the western part covers almost 700000 square kilometers. The Western Desert of Egypt is a part of the Sahara. Overall it covers about two-thirds of the land area of the country. There are Four major deserts and two smaller ones. The most fascinating thing about having so many deserts is to have camels as vehicles. Do you know how to draw a camel? Here is camel half-drawn which needs to be finished. Complete the drawing and colour it as per your choice of colours. Then add in the desert landscape.

Egypt : Trees

As Egypt has a dry desert climate, we do not find a wide range of natural forests. The native plants are usually leafless, thorny and slender. The native species of the trees include acacia, palm, date palm, tamarisk, cactus, bamboo and about 100 types of grasses. Also there are some aromatic herbs and succulents that are found often. The coastal area has some rich variety of plants in spring. Here we have listed some trees and plants that are found in Egypt. Look at them carefully and mark if any of them resembles any of the trees you find around you.
